Inspiring a Generation of Exceptional Canadian Entrepreneurs

VANCOUVER, BC - In the current age of 'blindingly quick technological advances and the social media explosion', companies expect employees to have both specialist and all-round abilities. School leavers must be capable of applying language arts, math, science, and technology equally well, and also to be able to combine these skills.

A new after-school learning centre in Kitsilano is planning to be the first company in Vancouver to provide a solution. Pear Tree Education, which is set to open its doors in the New Year, will offer programs which enable kids to understand how to blend all of their education and natural aptitudes to become the most successful people that they can be. "That will make a positive contribution to the Canadian economy and society," says Paul Romani, one of Pear Tree's two directors, along with Alexis Birner.

At the forefront of Pear Tree's after-school learning centres is its highly-qualified teaching staff that are equipped with master's degrees or double majors. These young, intelligent Vancouver school teachers will help make Pear Tree Education the number one choice for after-school educational services.

Paul, who has been described as 'an innovator, a teacher, a guide, but perhaps above all a facilitator', explains, "There are a lot of after-school tutoring centres out there with out-dated teaching methods. Pear Tree is different. With our highly-quality teachers and foundation on Education 3.0 principles, Pear Tree students develop 21st century skills. We're inspiring a generation of exception Canadian entrepreneurs and that's good news for everyone!"

"Paul is providing a setting and a means for students to learn, to engage, to discover, to develop and to come into their own," commented Ray Longauer of Vancouver Career College. "He helps them realize the potential they were never aware they possessed."

Opening in the New Year, the Pear Tree learning centre will be located on West Broadway / Stephens St. (near MacDonald St.) within close proximity of three local schools, a major public transit route, and off-road parking. It will be providing weekly classes, either Monday/Wednesday or Tuesday/Thursday.
